

Seeking Editor for Clinical Liver Disease

The American Association for the Study of Liver Diseases (AASLD) is seeking an Editor for Clinical Liver Disease (CLD). CLD is an online, monthly, clinical, open access, free to users, multimedia journal (see www.cldlearning.com).

CLD publishes 12 issues per year, each with 8-10 invited review articles. Each article is accompanied by a video interview with the lead author, an audio recording of the article, and in some instances a CME Learning activity. The Editor will work in close harmony with the publications teams at AASLD and the Publisher.

Regular responsibilities of the Editor include:

- Select editorial team members
- Identify topics, solicit content and select Guest Editors
- Create and approve monthly issue lineups with the help of editorial office staff
- Monthly conference calls with the editorial team
- Work with the content within the manuscript submission systems. Tasks may include assigning Associate Editors, selecting reviewers and making final decisions
- Conduct video interviews

Candidates for the position should:

- Be well-established and well-respected in academic hepatology and have a clear focus on clinical research/education, with a high profile in the field
- Have a broad understanding of basic and clinical research in the field
- Have previous editorial experience, preferably as an Editor-in-Chief, Associate Editor, or Deputy Editor for a scientific journal
- Be highly skilled in editing and writing
- Be comfortable with, and active on, social media
- Embrace innovative teaching and publication methods and platforms
- Be an AASLD regular or emeritus member throughout the complete tenure
- Have bandwidth or flexibility in their workload to commit to the responsibilities of Editor-in-Chief
- Be willing to work with an Editorial Office and Publisher located in the US Eastern Time Zone. You are not required to be in the same time zone.

The term will be July 2023 through December 2028. Content coordination has been and will continue to be through the AASLD central office in Alexandria, Virginia.

Each candidate should submit by March 31, 2022:

- A curriculum vitae
- Letters of support from the Dean and Department Chair of his or her academic affiliation
- A detailed statement outlining an assessment, editorial vision, and changes for CLD

The selection committee will review applications and will meet with finalists in September 2022, as part of the final selection process.

Please submit all applications to aharan@asld.org by March 31, 2022.

Note: The selection committee will consider individuals suggested by third parties. Suggestions for individual candidates and candidate teams may be sent by email to aharan@asld.org by March 3, 2022.